2. Other centers<sup>**</sup> in Canton not included in the above list are Nan Fang (南方) College and the Fourth Field Army Military and Political College. A cadre training class is, however, reported to be operated by the latter institution at Kunming, under LIN Piao, with 3,000 members. LIN Piao is also director of a Chinese People's Youth Army Cadre Training Center at Hankow, with an unspecified number of students.
3. The Public Safety Cadre School, established soon after the occupation of Canton, had 2,000 students by March 1950. T'AN Cheng-wen, who is head of the Bureau of Public Safety of Canton, as president permits the actual direction to be handled by TU Ming-pen (杜明本), the vice president. The school accepts students of varying levels, from junior middle school to college graduates. The first requisite course is political indoctrination; then students are permitted to choose a field of specialization such as road administration, housing administration, taxation, communications, and other phases of government.
4. Upon graduation, students of this school are assigned to public safety offices in South China. Because of the urgent need for administrative personnel, however, some students were assigned to work before they had completed their courses. In addition, new students familiar with Canton are being recruited from Hong Kong. The school dispatched KUAN Ch'ien (關前) to Hong Kong, where he established a recruiting program after consultation with CHANG Cheng-ming (張正明) and HUANG Wei-te (黃維德).
